

Fêtes d'Été

by Sue Burgess

Summer is here and with it, the multitude of village festivals, (fêtes de village), car boot sales (vide greniers) and so on.

The Terre de Festivals (the land of festivals), in Deux-Sèvres is a series of over 30 different events (évènements or manifestations).

Nuits Romanes is a multitude of evening events at Romanesque sites all over the Poitou Charentes region. There are concerts (concerts), spectacles (shows), son et lumière (sound and light shows), art des rues (street art) and feux d'artifice (fireworks). The Nuits Romanes events are free.

La brocante is the business of selling used objects which are generally of little value. The name is also used to describe the shops where this sort of business is done, as well as the popular events (foires populaires) which are often organised on Sundays and bank holidays.

Contrary to foires à tout or vide-greniers (car boot sales) which are made up of private individuals, brocantes are events where most of the sellers are professionals.

A vide-grenier is an informal event during which private individuals sell objects that they no longer have any need for.

A marché aux puces (Flea Market) is an open air market where there are no foodstuffs for sale. They are often also called Les puces.

A braderie is a market selling new things, often clothes, or a special day when shops have stalls outside in the street and sell (new) things off at a special price.

The word fête translates as celebration, feast or fun party. It also translates as Saint's Day. Un festival is a festival and a festival-goer is un festivalier.

There are lots of marché (markets), marché semi-nocturne (evening markets) and marché en fête (festival markets).

Remember not to confuse marché with marche which is a walk.

Some villages propose randonnée gourmande (organised rambles or walks with stops for food and drink).

If the children are looking for thrills then you might want to look for a fête foraine (funfair or travelling fair).

There are so many things happening in the summer you are bound to find something that suits your taste (est à votre goût).
